Design the Factory of the Future Now Using Control plus

Developing Machines

Based on the software system, the modular engineering approach allows machine and system manufacturers to realize their automation projects efficiently and with lower risks. The system comprises a software framework, an extensive object library and an user-friendly visualization system. Customized development tools support the user.

Operating Machines

Consistency in operation and service as well as modern assistant systems ensure that facilities based on Nexeed Automation remain at a consistently high level of availability. Deviations are visualized in real time, while assistant systems support efficient diagnosis and troubleshooting.

Hardware Suppliers

The Control plus automation software is designed for Beckhoff and (as of Q4/2018) Rexroth control systems. Depending on your application and requirements, you can choose from various performance classes. Another advantage: the control system is delivered fully set up, so all you need to do is switch it on and start using the software. Our hardware range is rounded off by a variety of display units and operating devices.
